Outsourced corporate development services

Backed by our consulting expertise, we offer pre-deal analysis involving comprehensive pre-transaction deal planning and modeling. The analysis includes the creation of both stand-alone and synergistic valuations to assist organizations in determining acquisition pricing, assessing acquisition returns, and understanding the cash flows generated from the post-transaction entity, as well as estimating pre-deal accretion or dilution.

We can also develop dynamic financial models for our clients, which enable buyers and/or sellers to run sensitivity analyses and scenario testing on key performance variables. Our models provide users with a detailed road map of projected growth, along with the impact of synergy and performance improvement opportunities.

Fresh start accounting

Crowe offers fresh start accounting services for entities that emerge from Chapter 11 bankruptcy. The accounting guidance requires certain emerging entities to adopt fresh start accounting, which involves fair value analyses to determine an entity's reorganization value and establish a new basis for financial reporting. All assets and liabilities of the emerging entities may need to be adjusted from historic balances to current fair values.

Solvency testing

We offer solvency opinions, which can lower the risk of fraudulent conveyance faced by the board of directors and shareholders. The purpose of solvency testing is to assess whether a company would remain solvent assuming a specific future event. Simply stated, in performing the solvency test, Crowe helps answer the questions, "Will the company be able to satisfy future liability obligations as they become due?" and "Will the company retain sufficient capital?" based upon the contemplated corporate action. Typical corporate actions for which solvency testing is applicable include dividend recapitalizations and highly leveraged transactions.
