

The business case for Crowe IRM-as-a-Service

Boost growth and collaboration by managing risk and compliance

Crowe IRM-as-a-Service is more than a risk management tool — it's a business tool for banking.

- Are your customers demanding more real-time interaction?
- Are regulators applying increased levels of scrutiny?
- Are your stakeholders asking for assurance in a dynamic and complex business environment?

We can help you can respond to all these needs and concerns with increased agility.

To win the battle for customers, end the conflict between your business and risk teams.

The rapidly evolving risk landscape in the banking industry might expose tensions between your organization's front office and its risk compliance teams.

How can you repair and strengthen that relationship to enable growth and speed?

The key lies in communication. All too often, governance, risk, and compliance (GRC) tools are designed exclusively with risk management professionals in mind. These tools put risk management activity in a silo and make it hard for the business team to have productive conversations with their risk and compliance colleagues.

The result is a fundamental disconnect, and risk management teams aren't equipped to think or communicate in terms of products and services. Meanwhile, team members on the front line have to make sense of risk and control content that, to them, only seems to exist to slow down activity.

Risk management and compliance responsibilities don't just belong to one team. They belong to the entire enterprise, and they require an enterprisewide solution.

Crowe IRM-as-a-Service increases visibility, collaboration, business contextuality, and efficiency across your organization to help everyone manage risk and drive business growth – together.

Be more strategic with your most valuable assets: people, money, and time.

Your resources are limited, and they're all interrelated, which can make allocation complicated. Crowe IRM-as-a-Service provides consistent visibility and communication to make risk management activity efficient and effective, and it can also help you maximize the returns you get from your people, money, and time.

1. People

Crowe IRM-as-a-Service is designed to help everyone in your organization work toward the common goal of growing the business.

Both your risk management teams and your front office will have a role to play in implementation and usage. Many GRC platforms are tailored exclusively to risk professionals and internal auditors, but Crowe IRM-as-a-Service also requires essential inputs from members of the business team. With streamlined communication between your various teams, everyone can help inform strategic decision-making.

If you need additional help or resources, you can easily assign tasks to Crowe specialists or request assistance with just a few clicks in the Crowe IRM-as-a-Service platform.

2. Money

Crowe IRM-as-a-Service can help you manage risk holistically without adding capital expenses.

Rather than slowing down strategic initiatives, mature risk management can allow you to confidently focus on pursuing new ventures, including product launches, mergers, acquisitions, and new markets. Investing in a tool that improves visibility and collaboration also can help you scale up your GRC processes without necessarily having to hire more people.

3. Time

Crowe IRM-as-a-Service helps you spend less time managing and reacting to existing risk and more time engaging in productive, business-building undertakings.

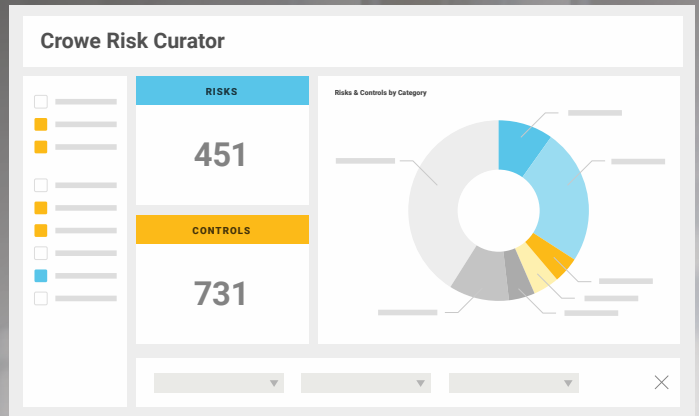

The system assigns clear responsibilities for managing processes, risks, and controls to increase transparency and accountability. With these assignments in place, your teams can identify and solve problems faster to keep growth strategies moving.

Crowe Risk Curator helps streamline implementation and creates a common language for talking about risks and controls.

Crowe Risk Curator is an integrated module within the Crowe IRM-as-a-Service solution, and it's also available on a stand-alone basis.

This tool uses business-focused inquiry to deliver a tailored library of risk management content. Crowe Risk Curator can make implementation much faster and simpler, and it also delivers usable content that's relevant to your markets, products, partners, and channels.

Increase your ROI by maximizing your return on individuals.

Save your employees valuable time, and empower them to work together to achieve a mutual goal: strategically building your business with speed and agility.

Small and midsize banks, credit unions, and fintechs want access to a scalable, complete GRC solution. That's why we created Crowe IRM-as-a-Service as a ready-to-use, hosted platform that delivers the benefits of true integrated risk management.
