Data Protection in Andorra seeks to protect the rights of individuals regarding the processing of their personal data.

The legislation safeguards the Principality of Andorra's opportunities for openness and avoids establishing obligations that could prevent or seriously hinder the economic, administrative or management activities of the Principality's public and private entities.

The new qualified Law on Data Protection (hereinafter “LQPD”) adopts the modifications of the European regulatory framework of recent years in this area, establishing a series of obligations to be fulfilled by public and private companies in Andorra.

The protection of personal data has become a national priority for the Principality of Andorra, because of the social and legislative changes existing on a global scale. In a society that is increasingly aware of the importance and value of its personal data, establishing a strategy that complies with the obligations derived from the applicable regulations will also provide significant added value for any organization.

At Crowe Andorra, we are aware of the interests and needs of our subjects bound by the Qualified Data Protection Act (LQPD).
