Professional Summary

- Ananth is a Partner in the Tax Group at Crowe Soberman. He first joined the firm as a tax co-op in 2015 and started full-time as a tax specialist in 2016.

Experience

- Ananth has extensive experience in compliance matters related to personal tax and corporate tax. He provides consulting on tax residency matters for high-net-worth individuals. He also provides consulting on the taxation of non-residents in Canada.
- He enjoys assisting clients on accounting and tax matters because he can work directly with them to resolve complex issues. Some of his clients include high net worth individuals, athletes, privately-held businesses, and non-resident entities doing business in Canada.
- Ananth published an article for the Jewish Foundation of Greater Toronto entitled “Donation of Private Company Shares”. Ananth is also a co-writer of Crowe Soberman’s article “Inter-corporate Dividends: Are They Still Tax-Free?” and “What Has Changed with Inter-Corporate Dividends.”
- In 2021, Ananth co-published an article for Crowe Soberman titled “Buying or Selling a Business?” which overviews some of the key tax elections to consider when buying or selling a business.
