Why a Variable Capital Company?

The Variable Capital Company (VCC) structure is highly flexible to accommodate the creation of sub-funds with either open or close-ended strategies.

The VCC can be used as a Collective Investment Scheme vehicle either as a stand-alone entity, or as an umbrella entity with multiple sub-funds with segregated assets and liabilities. It can be used as a retail fund (for retail investors), or restricted fund (for restricted class of investors like accredited investors). As a fund vehicle, a VCC can be open ended or closed. However, the rights must be set out in the VCC constitution.

Moreover, a VCC is permitted to freely redeem shares and pay dividends using its net assets/capital, thereby providing flexibility in the distribution and return of capital.
